Postdoc
The Grantham Research Institute on Climate Change and the Environment is pleased to invite applications for the post of Research Officer (Post-Doctoral Researcher) - Climate Adaptation, Resilience and Flood Risk Management.

The successful applicant will collaborate with Dr Swenja Surminski and conduct flood-resilience focused research under the Zurich Flood Resilience Alliance, an ambitious project that strives to contribute to the overall vision of de-risking communities from flood risk by providing evidence-based insight into understanding resilience and resilience decision-making. The appointee will be expected to play an active intellectual part in the project itself and be able to produce independent original research, collaborate with the diverse set of project partners, and conduct knowledge-transfer activities. This position is part of a new risk governance research group, led by Dr Surminski, which aims to explore new approaches to convert post-event focused risk governance into more effective pre-event resilience through research-based evidence gathering on incentives, investments, and risk governance, with a particular focus on the urban OECD context. Apply online.
